More gold at Hargraves than estimated

Hill End Gold is expected to release a resource re-estimate this month.

According to a release to the Australian Securities Exchange, the Big Nugget Hill Deposit at Hargraves is larger than current drilling shows.

“Infill assaying of drill hole samples adjacent to high grade zones indicates the presence of a previously unrecognised low grade halo which will increase gold content of the deposit,” the release said.

Geochemical sampling is also under consideration at the Gundowda zone in Hargraves after historical workings and surface rock samples indicate gold mineralisation along a kilometre strike.

The release also said there is no geological reason why gold mineralisation would be limited to the extent of drilling to date and work is ongoing to establish a reasonable mining scenario and to plan for appropriate drilling to test extensions.

Hill End Gold managing director Philip Bruce said the recent appointment of Dr Stuart Munroe as exploration manager left the company in a good position to realise their strategy of increasing the quality behind resource inventory.

He said Dr Munroe’s appointment would also take the company’s resource inventory to over one million ounces and look at facilitating the development of a commercially viable mining project.
